Methodology

Scope

The study on the use of cash by households (SUCH) in 2017 and the study on payment attitudes of consumers in the euro area (SPACE) in 2020 analysed consumers’ payment behaviour and their payment habits to assess how they use cash and non-cash means of payment.

As cash is still the only form of public money, there is a need to analyse the other aspect of the topic, i.e. the merchants’ behaviour. The aim of the Companies’ Survey on Cash is to provide an overview of companies’ strategic views on the current and future use and acceptance of cash, making sure cash remains a competitive means of payment. A data collection of this type has not previously been conducted at the euro area level in such a comprehensive manner.

All 19 countries in the euro area (Belgium, Germany, Estonia, Ireland, Greece, Spain, France, Italy, Cyprus, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, the Netherlands, Austria, Portugal, Slovenia, Slovakia and Finland) are covered by the survey.

Sample design and data collection

The survey is designed in a way that the statistical unit is the firm, where the firm is considered to have at least one employee. The respondent may, for example, be the owner, the chief financial officer or the head accountant. To improve response rates, the ECB has provided an official letter, on request, to respondents in order to reassure them as to the purpose of the survey.

The survey mode is the telephone interview. To ensure that the survey design is feasible, there was also a pilot phase.

The sample design sought to ensure that size classes were representative. The sample is a quota sample, stratified in each country by sector (as classified in the list of NACE codes by Eurostat) and, additionally, by enterprise size for the retail trade sector.

The data were collected between October and December 2021, by Kantar Public. Fieldwork was carefully monitored at all stages.

1 Esselink and Hernandez (2017).
2 European Central Bank (2020).
The sample was selected from an international business database. As mentioned in the introduction, this report focuses on the sectors that are most frequently interact with private customers and are most likely to receive payments from private consumers in cash. For this reason, the enterprises in the retail trade sector (NACE G45+G47) account for 50% of the sample. The retail trade sector sample is stratified by the following size classes: micro (1-9 employees), small (10-49), medium (50-249) and big (250+). Minimum quotas for micro and small enterprises were also applied.

Enterprises in accommodation and food service activities (NACE I) have a quota of 10%, while enterprises in arts, entertainment and recreation (NACE R) have a quota of 5%. Enterprises were covered in all size classes mentioned, and the coverage of large enterprises was only a requirement in countries in which the total sample size was 500 or more.

By the end of the fieldwork, a total of 10,141 interviews had been conducted for all enterprises. Table 1 shows the distribution of the sample per country.

The total sample in the main sectors of interest was 7,271, as shown in the third column.

Notes: Main sectors of interest comprise retail trade, hotels, restaurants and cafes, and arts, entertainment and recreation.
Weighting and validation of the data

The data have been subjected to quality checks, validation and weighting.

Weighting was carried out to ensure that the net sample was representative of the population, to minimise the bias of the survey estimate and ensure inferences were solid.

The data and the results shown in the paper were weighted using an employee weight. This weight the data in each size class, economic sector and country in relation to population estimates based on the number of employees. The employee weight thereby ensures that the sample is weighted in a way that is proportional to the total number of employees in each weighting cell. Most of the population targets were obtained from Eurostat’s two sources of business statistics: 1) Structural Business Statistics and 2) Business Demography.

The weighting was performed in two stages, the first calculating the weights within each sector that has a specific quota. This ensures compensation for the oversampling of large enterprises. Stage two takes a calibration weight for each sector. This weight simply calibrates the samples for the four specific quotas to their relative employee population estimates.
