1 Notes for data on Securities Exchanges (SEE)

Source of data for the following securities exchanges is the Federation of European Stock Exchanges (FESE):

Irish Stock Exchange, Athens Stock Exchange (Greece), BME Spanish Exchanges, Cyprus Stock Exchange, Société de la Bourse de Luxembourg, Malta Stock Exchange, CEESEG – Vienna (Austria), CEESEG – Ljubljana (Slovenia), Prague Stock Exchange (Czech Republic), Budapest Stock Exchange (Hungary), Giełda Papierow Wartosciowych w. Warszawie (Poland), Bursa de Valori București (Romania), NYSE Euronext and NASDAQ OMX Nordic and Bulgarian Stock Exchange

As of 2015, Bratislava Stock Exchange is no longer a member of FESE. As a result, as of reference period from 2015, data for Bratislava Stock Exchange is reported by the National Bank of Slovakia.

As of July 2016, Ljubljana Stock Exchange is no longer a member of FESE. As a result, for reference period from 2016, a subset of the SEE data for Ljubljana Stock Exchange was reported by the National Bank of Slovenia.

As of 2018, Bulgarian Stock Exchange’s membership in FESE is renewed.

Furthermore, when it comes to FESE data collection, FESE has attempted to collect that on a more granular level. Several data providers (i.e. stock exchanges) have not yet fully implemented the increased granularity in their reporting schemes for 2017, and as a result some data is unavailable for 2017. Aggregates were created by summing up all the available data and not taking into account missing data. For example, if three values are necessary to create an aggregate but only two of the values are available, the total is created using only the two available values. This approach has been taken for calculating the quantity of listed (domestic and non-domestic) debt securities as well as for any items including debt securities (i.e. total listed securities).

Data for the London Stock Exchange is reported directly by the organisation itself.

All other SEE data are reported by the National Central Banks of the country in which the system(s) is(are) located.

Time series on securities exchanges are identified with the first dimension code of “SEE”.
